Here's What We Know So Far About the Newest Episode Series From John M. Hayeck.

Three kids named Clarke Kamble, Casey Jones and Rob steal live on a mysterious island in the Pacific. They planned to get out. Clarke and Casey followed the South River up to the North Coast and got on a boat to escape. Clarke was caught by a Hood, and brought to an island prison facility in the North. Casey tries to break him out.

While interned there, Clarke meets Rob's dad (Con Steal), who tells him about Limetown itself, and MemJuice, and how the effect is in the scent not the taste, among other things. Casey finds a food transport tunnel along the prison walls. The two, along with Mr. Steal take two boats and part their ways, Con back to Limetown to reunite with his family, and the duo to America, to start a new Limetown-free life.

When their ship becomes destroyed in a storm, the two land in California, only to be confronted by the same Hood who found them consistently at Limetown. The Hood congratulates them, saying that their have been few other living people to escape Limetown. The successful, and wise seven are now on the Council of Hooded Hoods, running Limetown, and only the Hoods know the true purpose: to fight Limetown's sister island in an upcoming war. William Shakespeare is the leader of the Hoods, and has manufactured a liquid similar to MemJuice, but instead of wiping memories, it extends his life, depending on how much he takes.

Clarke and Casey can too become Hoods and join the fight, if they return to Limetown.

This leaves Casey and Clarke confused, torn and with a swing decision.

That's what we know so far. Episode 3 is now available, with no more recaps to come!!!!
